ABITUR ENGLISH · WRITING

analyse · examine

How to show how a text works – and why

WHAT DO “ANALYSE” AND “EXAMINE” MEAN?

“describe and explain in detail and give evidence from the text, relating the content to relevant aspects of language and form”

Both operators mean the same. analyse (British) and analyze (American) are both correct.

The key: point – evidence – effect

POINT

What does the author do? One topic sentence.

Moreover, her imagery underlines how serious the loss is.

EVIDENCE

Where? Short quotation or line reference.

The metaphor that each closure “tears another hole in the fabric of our towns” (l. 8) …

EFFECT

Why? What it achieves – linked to the task.

… presents the town as something fragile that is being destroyed piece by piece.

Dos and don’ts

DO	DON’T
✓ explain how and why: point → evidence → effect	× list devices without saying what they achieve
✓ cover every focus after Focus on …	× leave out a focus area
✓ group your paragraphs by aspects or functions	× go through the text line by line
✓ short quotations built into your sentences: “…” (l. 8), (ll. 9-11), (cf. l. 12)	× long quotations, line 8, German quotation marks „…“
✓ link every paragraph back to the task	× retell the content
✓ simple present, neutral; narrator ≠ author	× your opinion, I think, judging the author

Step by step

Model task: Analyse how the author conveys her concern about the decline of local bookshops. Focus on communicative strategies and use of language.

STEP	WHAT TO DO	MODEL TASK (text on page 3)
① Read the task	Underline the aspect you have to analyse. Underline every focus after Focus on …	Aspect: how the author conveys her concern. Focus: communicative strategies + use of language.
② Collect	Mark devices in the text and note the line. Write the effect next to each one.	anecdote (ll. 1-4) → sympathy · we (l. 4) → responsibility · metaphor (l. 8) → destruction · where … (ll. 9-11) → warmth
③ Select and group	Choose the most important devices – depth beats quantity. Group them by focus or function, not by line order.	¶1 strategies: anecdote, inclusive we ¶2 language: metaphor, enumeration, contrast
④ Write	Optional: one opening sentence that answers the task in a nutshell. One paragraph per group: point → evidence → effect. Short conclusion: answer the task, no new devices.	In her commentary, … conveys her concern mainly by …
⑤ Check	Every device with evidence and effect? Every focus covered? No retelling, no opinion? Simple present?	Both foci covered; every quotation explained.

Typical tasks in the Abitur

- Analyse the various reasons for the success of Silent Book Clubs. Focus on communicative strategies and use of language. (2026, gA)
- Analyse how Lara perceives the various facets of Tom Lake and its surroundings. Focus on use of language. (2026, gA)
- Analyse the interaction between Gabriel's parents and Beth, taking into account its effects on the young woman. Focus on narrative situation as well as use of language. (2026, eA)

→ Every focus after Focus on … needs its own part of your answer.

Useful phrases

Opening sentence (optional)	Einleitungssatz (optional)
In the commentary "…", the author conveys her concern about … mainly by …	Im Kommentar „…" vermittelt die Autorin ihre Sorge über … vor allem durch …
The narrator's feelings become obvious through …	Die Gefühle des Erzählers werden deutlich durch …
Naming a device and giving evidence	Mittel benennen und belegen
The author uses / makes use of an anecdote / a metaphor …	Die Autorin verwendet / nutzt eine Anekdote / eine Metapher …
The metaphor "…" (l. 8) … / This is illustrated by … (cf. ll. 9-11).	Die Metapher „…" (Z. 8) … / Das wird veranschaulicht durch … (vgl. Z. 9–11).
Explaining the effect	Die Wirkung erklären
This emphasises / highlights / underlines …	Das betont / hebt hervor / unterstreicht …
This suggests / implies that …	Das deutet darauf hin / legt nahe, dass …
This creates the impression that … / This evokes a feeling of …	Das erweckt den Eindruck, dass … / Das ruft ein Gefühl von … hervor
The reader is thus encouraged to … / The reader is likely to …	Der Leser wird so dazu gebracht, … / Der Leser wird wahrscheinlich …
Linking to the task	Bezug zur Aufgabe
In this way, the author conveys her concern about …	Auf diese Weise vermittelt die Autorin ihre Sorge über …
This reflects / reveals the narrator's …	Das spiegelt … des Erzählers wider / zeigt …
Moving on and concluding	Überleiten und abschließen
Furthermore, … / Apart from …, the author also …	Außerdem … / Neben … nutzt die Autorin auch …
All in all, the author's use of … makes her criticism very clear.	Alles in allem macht der Einsatz von … ihre Kritik sehr deutlich.

TOOLBOX: TERMS

USE OF LANGUAGE
word choice (positive/negative connotation), emotive language, register, metaphor, simile, personification, alliteration, repetition, anaphora, enumeration, parallelism, contrast, hyperbole, imagery

COMMUNICATIVE STRATEGIES (non-fiction)
anecdote, personal experience, facts and figures, expert opinion, rhetorical question, inclusive we, direct address, appeal to emotions / to logic, irony, call to action

NARRATIVE TECHNIQUES (fiction)
first-/third-person narrator, point of view, direct/indirect characterization, dialogue, interior monologue, setting, atmosphere, symbol, foreshadowing, flashback

STRUCTURE AND VISUALS headline, opening, line of argument, contrast, climax, ending, change of tone · photo/cartoon: foreground, caption, symbol – and its function for the text

AVOID

× There is a metaphor in l. 8.
✓ The metaphor "…" (l. 8) suggests that …

× "tears another hole" (l. 8). (quotation on its own)
✓ … describes each closure as tearing "another hole" (l. 8), which …

× This shows … This shows … This shows …
✓ emphasises · suggests · evokes · reinforces

× The author feels lonely. (first-person narrator)
✓ The narrator feels lonely.

Model solution

MODEL TEXT (INVENTED FOR PRACTICE · LEVEL B2/C1)

Closing Time for the High Street Bookshop – commentary by Helen Ward, The Ashbridge Courier

When Ruth Carter opened her bookshop in Ashbridge in 1987, there were four others on the same street. Today, hers is the only one left – and next spring, it will close too. Ruth is not giving up because people have stopped reading. She is giving up because we have stopped walking through her door.

We all know the reasons. A paperback costs two pounds less online, and it arrives the next morning without our having to leave the sofa. Convenient? Certainly. But what are we really buying? Across the country, hundreds of independent bookshops have closed in recent years, and each closure tears another hole in the fabric of our towns.

A bookshop is not just a place where books are sold. It is a place where a stranger recommends a novel you would never have chosen, where children sit on the floor and read, where a lonely pensioner finds someone to talk to. An algorithm can tell you what "customers also bought". It cannot ask you how you are.

So the next time you are about to click "Buy now", ask yourself one question: what kind of high street do we want to leave to our children?

Analyse how the author conveys her concern about the decline of local bookshops. Focus on communicative strategies and use of language.

P point EV evidence EF effect · phrases from page 2 in bold

OPENING (optional)

In her commentary "Closing Time for the High Street Bookshop", Helen Ward conveys her concern about the decline of local bookshops mainly by appealing to the readers' emotions and making them feel partly responsible.

PARAGRAPH 1 (communicative strategies)

P To begin with, the author opens with the story of a single bookseller to make the problem concrete. EV She tells the reader that Ruth Carter's shop is "the only one left" (l. 2) and will soon close. EF This anecdote turns an abstract trend into a personal fate, so readers are more likely to sympathise. EV The parallel sentences "Ruth is not giving up because […]. She is giving up because […]" (ll. 3-4) then shift the responsibility to "we" (l. 4). EF By using the inclusive "we", the author makes the readers feel responsible without attacking them directly.

PARAGRAPH 2 (use of language)

P Moreover, her imagery underlines how serious the loss is. EV The metaphor that each closure "tears another hole in the fabric of our towns" (l. 8) EF presents the town as something fragile that is being destroyed piece by piece. EV In addition, the enumeration of "where" clauses (cf. ll. 9-11) EF emphasises what a bookshop offers beyond books and evokes a warm, human atmosphere. This contrasts sharply with the cold "algorithm" (l. 11), which "cannot ask you how you are" (l. 12).

CONCLUSION

All in all, the author conveys her concern through a personal story, inclusive language and emotive imagery, which makes the decline of bookshops appear both sad and avoidable.

ALSO POSSIBLE – BUT YOU DON'T NEED EVERYTHING

- the rhetorical questions (ll. 6-7, 13-14) and the call to action at the end (cf. l. 13)
- the short question and answer "Convenient? Certainly." (l. 6)
- the structure: from one shop to the whole country to the reader's own decision

→ Two well-explained paragraphs are better than ten devices without effect.